AAP Releases Updated Safe Sleep Guidelines

The American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) recently released new guidelines designed to help reduce the risk of sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS) and other types of sleep-related infant deaths, which are also known as sudden unexpected infant deaths (SUIDs). SIDS is the leading cause of death among infants between 1 month and 1 year of age, with 90 percent of SIDS cases occurring before an infant is 6 months old.

The new report suggests that:

- Infants should sleep in the same room as their parents, but in separate beds, for at least the first six months of their lives.
- Infants should never sleep on a soft surface, such as an armchair or couch.
- Infants should be placed on their backs to sleep on a firm surface with a tight-fitting sheet.
- Parents should avoid putting an infant in a crib with pillows, loose sheets, blankets or other soft surfaces.

The Connection Between Office Camaraderie and Your Health

Getting along with your co-workers can make the task of going to work more enjoyable and, according to recent research, can actually improve your health.

The Society for Personality and Social Psychology analyzed 58 studies of more than 19,000 people from different parts of the world and published its findings in the Personality and Social Psychology Review, an academic journal. The report also explains that when individuals identify and are invested in relationships with their colleagues, workplace productivity increases, employee morale increases and burnout levels decrease.

If you have not already done so, consider taking steps toward building professional, positive relationships with your co-workers. Use the following tips to develop positive relationships with your colleagues:

1. Be friendly and encouraging
2. Be supportive of other people's work
3. Initiate conversations, repeated interactions and communications
4. Be respectful to your co-workers and their space
5. Participate in activities that don't involve work
6. Maintain a positive attitude as much as possible

Reduce Your Holiday Stress

The holidays can bring joy, but they can also bring stress. Whether you are worried about money, gift-giving or finding enough time to get everything done, using the following coping mechanisms can help you manage and reduce your holiday stress.

- Get organized—Writing down the things you need to do or places you need to be can help you visualize your to-do list and make it seem much more manageable.
- Know that it's OK to say "no"—If attending an event that isn't important to you will interfere with you getting work done or running errands, just say "no" politely.
- Create and stick to a budget—Money is one of the biggest holiday stressors for people. Set a realistic budget this holiday season and don't go over it.
- Ask for help when you need it—You don't have to decorate, wrap presents or cook by yourself. Ask friends or family members to help you complete these tasks.

Safe Toys and Gifts Month

Did you know that choking causes one third of all toy-related deaths—most often from balloons? Children under the age of 4 are often most susceptible to injury. Keep your children safe by following these toy safety tips:

- Consider the child's age, interests and skill level. Look for quality design and follow age and safety recommendations on labels.
- Determine whether small toys may present a choking hazard to children under age 3. If a toy can pass through the cardboard core of a toilet paper roll, it is too small for young children and may cause them to choke if swallowed.
- Avoid toys with sharp points or edges and toys that produce loud noises and projectiles (such as darts).
- Avoid toys with strings, straps or cords longer than 7 inches that may pose a risk of strangulation for young children.
- Avoid giving children under age 8 electrical toys with heating elements.
- Keep deflated balloons away from children younger than 8 and discard broken ones immediately.
